A top-tier litigator who has served in all three branches of the U.S. government, Steve has played a pivotal role in resolving some of the most complex and contentious issues in environmental, natural resources, and energy law in both the public and private sectors for more than 25 years.

Steve represents clients in matters involving environmental permitting, natural resource damages, public lands, and energy disputes. He joined Marten following a distinguished career as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the District of Oregon, where he successfully handled many of the district's most consequential and controversial environmental disputes during the last two decades. These cases involved resources and issues ranging from timber, water quality and use, developed recreation, transportation, grazing, protected species, wetlands, and energy (encompassing production, transmission, and rate-setting) matters. Steve has also handled cases and been at the forefront of various initiatives addressing highly sensitive environmental issues throughout the country, with a principal focus on the Western United States. A native Westerner, Steve has virtually unparalleled knowledge of the unique array of legal and policy issues related to management of natural resources and public lands in the region.

Steve's career experience spans all three branches of the U.S. Government. In addition to nearly 20 years of service as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the District of Oregon, he served as: Executive Director, Regional Ecosystem Office, 2000-03; Senior Counsel, U.S. Senate Committee on Environment & Public Works, 1995-97; and Honors Attorney, U.S. DOJ Environment & Natural Resources Division, 1990-95.
